Warrington

Dear Sir,

[REDACTED] and obviously seen lots of changes. Such as green belt disappearing with houses being built at it. No more roads though. In the nineteen sixties there were compulsory purchase orders issued to some residents in the area of the cantilever bridge. Nothing was done, apart from demolishing two houses at the end of Fairfield Road. Parking is ridiculous. Some even parking in our road to go shopping in the village. Double yellow lines would be excellent up to Edgerton Street on the canal bank side of Ellesmere Road. As parking on that side is terrible, I struggle to push my Grandson to nursery over the bridge. Some even using the whole of the path. It would also shorten the queue of traffic coming out, some of which wanting to turn right to go up the village,

There is virtually no proper infrastructure to support any more houses let alone encroaching on more green belt still.

Yours faithfully

Susan and Peter Keeffe.
