Dear Alex,

Thank you for your email.

We have an interactive Local Plan map available to view from the link below.

<https://mapping.warrington.gov.uk/wml/Map.aspx?MapName=DraftLocalPlan>

All the Plan layers are turned on by default but you can turn them off by clicking on the three lines (what would you like to do) at the top left hand of the page, then selecting choose map layers and deselecting every layer (to make it clearer) apart from Policy MD2 South East Warrington Urban Extension. As you will see there is also a search box where you can type in road name etc. to navigate to the area of interest on the map. Alternatively, you can drag the map about to the required area of interest.

We also have a Local Plan Map large PDF version, available to view from the link below

The display boards from the consultation events at the Halliwell Jones Stadium are also available from the link below and it will be the boards that make reference to Policy MD2 South East Warrington Urban Extension that will be of most relevance to you.

For your information, we have taken the other points you raised in your email as an objection to the Local Plan.

Best Wishes,

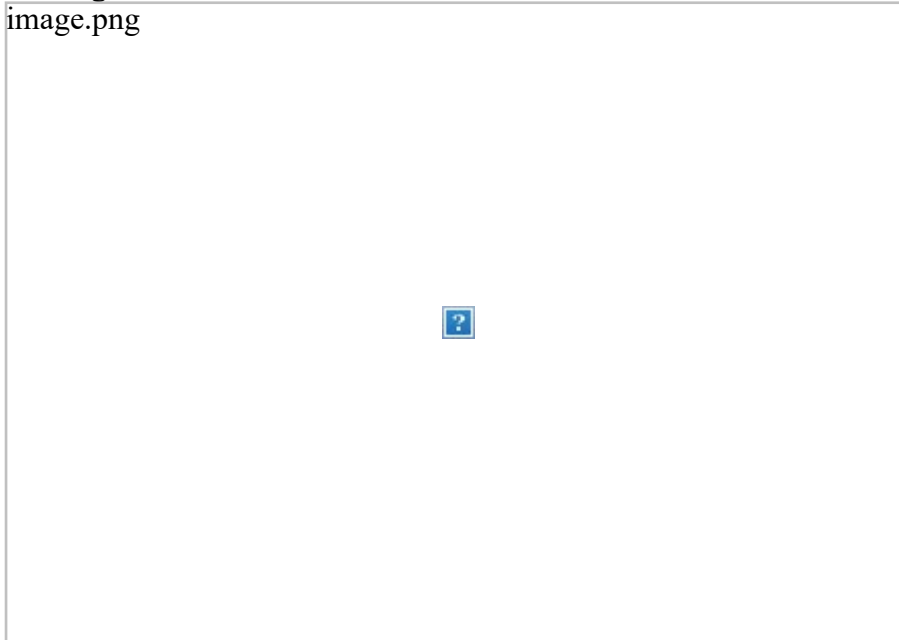

Planning Policy and Programmes Team.

Subject: Local plan question

Hello,

I am not sure whether the local plan map is purposely made to look complicated in order to confuse people. For example, I live [REDACTED] in Appleton and from the map below, I have no idea whether any of the fields around me will be used for housing or not.

Is it possible to provide a plan where it splits it up into the different villages it will affect?

On the whole though, I desperately oppose these plans, not because it may affect the fields opposite me and I live in a nice rural area, but because it completely goes against the UK's and the World's ambitions to reduce CO2 emissions. Digging up all that land just damages ecosystems, reduces areas to soak up CO2 and increases houses which will simply use more energy.

I understand these houses need to be built due to demand, but there has to be areas on brownfield sites which can be used for all of these houses, there are loads of brownfield sites in central warrington.

I understand that money talks and housing developers will want to build on greenbelt, but surely we have to stop this because when will this end?! In 20 years time there will be more local plans drawn up to eat into our greenbelt once again until there is nothing left for future generations.

Please though could you provide a more detailed map on the local plan to make it easier for people to understand which areas will be affected at a more granular level?

Kind regards,

Alex
